

Supply Chain Buyer / Planner

This is a small, well established company that over the past few years has introduced very creative and well received product. As a consequence, the company has seen very healthy growth, tripling in size over the past five years.

The client develops and manufactures complex mechanical assemblies. 600 discrete components go into the product, most of them sourced locally. There is an internal machine shop and much of the product goes overseas for final assembly.

This buyer planner is a key player with broad responsibility for supply chain issues. This is a highly visible role involving constant interaction with the General Manager, Director of Marketing and Operations Manager. This supply chain expert is responsible for:

- developing a master schedule
- simple production plans
- shortage reports
- releasing and managing shop orders
- procurement of mechanical and electronic components
- overseeing subcontractor supply chain issues

The minimal requirements to qualify:

- bachelor of science degree
- comprehensive and direct experience in buying and planning in small to midsize, mechanical assemblies and electronics manufacturer
- proficiency in excel and MRP/ERP business systems
- experience managing a turnkey supply chain
- strong planning skills; master scheduling skills preferred
- expertise sourcing mechanical and electronics commodities
- recent, demonstrated hands-on experience managing a similar sized, mechanical assemblies and electronics supply chain
